Bruce Ferden Named Distinguished Alumnus For 1993

Bruce Ferden, who established himself as one of America’s leading conductors of symphony and opera, received the School of Music’s Distinguished Alumnus of the Year Award on May 13 at the School’s Annual Graduation Recognition Ceremony.

Bruce Ferden earned a Bachelor of Music degree in 1971 from the University of Miami School of Music with a double major in conducting and piano performance. He graduated Summa Cum Laude with a cumulative grade point average of 4.0.

Ferden was born in Minnesota of Norwegian heritage. He did graduate work at the University of Southern California and at the Juilliard School. Once in New York, he began working with Peter Herman Adler at the American Opera Center.

At age 25, Ferden was appointed assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic and from there proceeded to establish a strong reputation in the United States and in Europe as an orchestral and opera conductor, as well as a proponent of new music. Mr. Ferden served for six years as the music director of the Spokane Symphony Orchestra, and for thirteen years as music director of the Nebraska Chamber Orchestra. Substantially expanded national and international activities led him to leave both posts.

In the 1992-93 season, Mr. Ferden made his Metropolitan Opera debut conducting the world premiere of Philip Glass’ The Voyage. Also, he returned to the Dallas Opera to conduct Lucia di Lammermoor and a triple

Dear Alumni and Friends:

I wish to dedicate this issue of Score to Lee Kjelson and Alfred Reed, who both retired in the end of the 1992-93 academic year. Lee Kjelson came to our university twenty-six years ago and built one of the most comprehensive choral programs in all of higher education. Alfred Reed, who joined the faculty twenty-seven years ago, founded the first university-based professionally accredited degree program in music industry here at the University of Miami and also became the world's most performed living composer of music for bands. Their contributions have been beyond measure. I am pleased to report that they are both in excellent health and that their professional projects extend well into the future.

The life of an institution such as ours is constantly evolving, and thus I am also pleased to make note of the appointments of extraordinary new leadership for three of our major ensembles and conducting programs: Gary Green, director of bands; Jo-Michael Scheibe, director of choral studies; and Thomas Sleeper, director of orchestral activities. Each of these newly appointed faculty members brings to the School of Music a national profile in support of our ongoing goals for further excellence.

The School of Music has historically enjoyed mutually beneficial relationships with several segments of the music industry. Without such support, many of our programs would not have met with the success that they have enjoyed to date. The most recent and significant association in this realm is with the Morgan Music Company of Miami, which last year entered into an agreement to provide the School with over fifty Yamaha pianos each year for fifteen years. We have just entered the second year of that agreement, which ensures that our students and faculty will enjoy practicing and performing on an inventory of excellent acoustic and electronic keyboard instruments that will be renewed with each passing year. Examples of additional industry support are given elsewhere in the newsletter, and are also deeply appreciated.

Festival Miami will be celebrating its tenth anniversary in September/October. Over the years, this international festival has presented a stellar array of performers, composers, and conductors and has served as a venue for many U.S. and world premiers. Festival Miami would not have enjoyed the success that it has without the support and participation of so many of our faculty, as well as outstanding student performing resources. The Festival is supported entirely by external corporate, private, and governmental resources and has earned a reputation for being one of the most significant outreach programs by a school of music in the U.S. This issue of Score contains information about artists and programming for 1993.

Very best wishes.

William Hipp

Patricia L. Frost Professor of Music
Festival Miami, founded in 1983, is an international celebration of music presented annually by the University of Miami School of Music. Morgan Music Co., Inc. sold the 49 Yamaha pianos it provided to the University of Miami School of Music in the first year of a 15-year program. The special public sale on the UM campus is part of an ongoing program that will effectively make Morgan Music the school’s official supplier of keyboard instruments. At the end of each year, the previous year’s instruments will be sold to the public in a special sale, and Morgan Music will provide new Yamaha instruments to replace them.

“This type of program is being tried between musical instrument dealers and colleges in other cities in the United States, and is proving very beneficial to both,” said Raymond Morgan of Morgan Music Co., Inc. in Miami. “It allows music stores to make a significant contribution to music education, and lets the school provide their students with high quality instruments, including some of the best teaching keyboards made.”

The instruments being donated include several Yamaha Disklavier pianos, which have a computer disk drive that allows the player to record music.
Ivan Davis was awarded the 1993 Phillip Frost Award for Excellence in Teaching and Scholarship at the School of Music Graduation Recognition Ceremony on May 13. The $5,000 award, established to recognize the achievement of the music school’s most distinguished faculty, is funded by the Patricia L. Frost Endowment.

Professor Ivan Davis joined the faculty of the School of Music in 1966 as “Artist in Residence,” and during his thus far 22-year tenure has effectively influenced the musical development of literally hundreds of students.

A 1952 graduate of the University of North Texas School of Music, which gave him its distinguished alumnus award in 1969, and a recipient of an artist diploma from the Accademia Di Santa Cecilia in Rome, Ivan Davis was a pupil of Silvio Sciorti, Carlo Zecchi, and Vladimir Horowitz.

Artists Competition in 1955; receiving a Fulbright Award for study in Italy that same year; winning first prize in the International Busoni Competition in 1957 and first prize in the International Casella Competition in 1958; his New York debut recital was in Town Hall in 1959; and he won first prize in the International Franz Liszt Competition in 1960.

All of this competition activity and the visibility that it afforded him gave rise to a distinguished career as a recitalist, soloist with major orchestras, and recording artist that continues to the present day and well beyond. Among the major orchestras with which he has appeared as a soloist are the Philadelphia Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, the Royal Philharmonic, The London Philharmonic, and the Cleveland Orchestra. His catalog of over twenty recordings includes performances with several of these orchestras as well as numerous solo albums that have garnered wide critical acclaim.

and then play it back, note-for-note, exactly as it was originally performed. Some of the Clavinova pianos also have the play-back feature, and can also be played silently, using headphones. These features make the Disklavier and Clavinova extraordinarily effective for rehearsing, applying compositional skills, and maintaining quiet noise levels when many instruments are being played in one classroom.

“It’s like a sketch pad. It’s a thousand percent better than listening to a tape recording,” says J. Robert Floyd, chairman of the keyboard performance department, when speaking of the Disklavier. “It’s a terrific learning and teaching tool.”

Each of the Clavinova digital pianos has been interfaced with IBM personal computers. “This allows students to become literate in computer music applications right from the beginning of their studies,” says William Hipp, Dean of the School of Music.

The instruments being supplied by Morgan Music also include a selection of Yamaha acoustic pianos, including studio uprights, baby grands, and concert grand models. All of the new instruments are replacing instruments at the school that are 15 to 20 years old.

“Morgan Music Company has a long tradition of supporting the performing arts in Miami,” says Hipp. “Our ability to provide our students will new Yamaha keyboard instruments each year, through Morgan Music, will enhance our reputation as one of the top music schools in the country.”

Sculpture of Mozart
Created By Enzo Gallo

The unveiling of a sculpture of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart created by Enzo Gallo and commissioned by Simon Daro Dawidowicz was held on December 9, 1992 in Gusman Concert Hall. Performances by the University of Miami Woodwind Chamber Ensemble, pianist Felix Rivera-Guzman, and the Bergonzoni String Quartet preceded the unveiling ceremony. Musical selections from the all-Mozart program included Serenade No. 12, K. 388, Sonata in D Major, K. 576, and String Quartet in D Major, K. 499.

Simon Daro Dawidowicz, who commissioned the sculpture, has been a supporter of the arts throughout his life, and the University of Miami has been the recipient of his generosity many times. He founded the Daro Dawidowicz Foundation to promote research and creative writing about Simon Bolivar, his idol.

An artist of international renown, Enzo Gallo was born in Padula, Italy, where he lived until 1948 when he left the war torn country to migrate to Cuba. In 1960, Gallo left Cuba and headed to Florida. Gallo currently works at Ponte Vecchio, his studio/gallery. There he creates large dimensional sculptures suitable for immense salons and gardens. Gallo also has a studio in Carrara, Italy, where he has worked with such sculptors as Henry Moore and Lipshitz. Many of his works can be found in corporate and private collections throughout the world.

Gloria Estefan
Doctor of Music

The University of Miami held its annual commencement ceremony on May 14 on the central lawn of its Coral Gables campus. Among the honorary degree recipients was singer and songwriter, Gloria Estefan.

Despite her international celebrity status, Gloria Estefan's heart has remained close to home. Her popular song, "Coming Out of the Dark," a personal reflection of her recovery from injuries sustained in a serious bus accident, has become the anthem of many South Floridians recovering from Hurricane Andrew. She and her husband Emilio helped produce the Hurricane Relief Concert, which raised more than $2 million for the victims of Hurricane Andrew.

Estefan, who received her undergraduate degree in psychology from the University of Miami in 1978, was born in Cuba in 1957. Her parents brought her to the United States before the age of two. In 1975, while a student at UM, Gloria joined Emilio Estefan's Latin band. The group soon changed its name to the Miami Sound Machine and Gloria became the lead singer.

In all, Gloria and the Miami Sound Machine have sold more than 20 million records, had 17 top-10 hits and completed four world tours. In addition, she and Emilio have received several Grammy nominations, she and the band won an American Music Award in 1990, and she was named EMI Songwriter of the Year in 1988.

Last September, President George Bush named Gloria a public member of the United States delegation to the 47th General Assembly of the United Nations.
Winners of 1993 Frost Prize
In Composition Debut

The winning selections from the 1993 Abraham Frost Prize in composition at the University of Miami School of Music were performed on April 22 at UM Guzman Concert Hall. The University of Miami Woodwind Ensemble is directed by Luciano Magnanini, professor of bassoon and chairman of the woodwind program. The concert was conducted by Dennis Kam, professor and chairman of the department of theory and composition.

This was the third annual competition for compositions of chamber works for 5 to 12 instruments from the woodwind families. The competition was established in 1990 with a gift from Phillip and Patricia Frost and named after Frost’s father, Abraham, because of his love of music.

The winner of the first prize of $3,000 was Robert Aquino of New York for his composition, Three Dances for Woodwinds. The second prize of $1,500 was awarded to David Jones of Bloomington, Indiana, for his Octet for Winds. The third prize of $1,000 was given to Dorothy Fernandez of Miami for her Fury’s Chalice. Stanworth Beckler of Stockton, California, won the honorable mention for Little Suite.

Aquino, a composer and jazz pianist, is currently the chairman of the Department of Music at Long Island University. He has a master’s degree from the Manhattan School of Music.

Jones is currently a doctoral student at Indiana University. He received his master’s degree from the New England Conservatory and his bachelor’s degree from the University of Washington. Performances of his music have been given at the Tanglewood Festival, New England Music Camp, and the Percussive Arts Society International Convention.

Fernandez, a South Florida native, received her bachelor’s degree from the UM School of Music before going to Duke University to work on her master’s degree. She is currently pursuing her doctorate at UM.

In 1990, Phillip and Patricia Frost gave $1.5 million to the School of Music to establish the Patricia Louise Frost Professorship for the Dean of the School of Music, the Anna Frost Music Scholarship Fund and the Abraham Frost prize in Composition.

Frost, a prominent dermatologist, has been a member of the UM Board of Trustees since 1983 and is chief executive officer for IVAX Pharmaceuticals. Patricia Frost has been an educator with Dade County Public Schools for more than 20 years.

School of Music Goes Even More Global

The School of Music seems to increasingly fit UM President Edward Foote’s vision of “a global university.” For six years, the school has maintained a five-week summer program in Salzburg, Austria, that now comprises 42 students who are taught by three UM faculty artists and artists in residence at the Salzburg Music Festival.

During the summer of 1992, the School of Music expanded its operations by initiating a musical exchange with the Trento Conservatory in Italy involving 15 UM students and two faculty members in master classes, chamber music coaching, and several concerts. Then, in the fall of 1992, a similar contingent of students and a chorus from Trento participated in Festival Miami and master classes and coaching sessions, and performed with the UM Symphony Orchestra.

The School of Music has also initiated an academic exchange program with Vienna’s Hochschule für Musik which began this past fall; an additional exchange program with Holland’s Hilversum Conservatory is in the planning stages. The highly regarded UM Jazz Program figures heavily in these programs.

Meanwhile, Dean Hipp is pursuing other international initiatives. For three years the School has recruited students in Taiwan, Hong Kong, South Korea, and Japan, and this year Singapore has been added to the schedule.

One novel aspect of UM’s Far Eastern recruitment effort is its participation with other university music departments in auditioning prospective students. Each fall, a team of representatives from UM, the Eastman School of Music, Northwestern University, the University of Southern California, and the Peabody Conservatory conduct joint auditions.

Former Music Dean Gives Lectures

John Bitter, dean emeritus of the University of Miami School of Music, returned to the UM faculty this fall as a guest lecturer in a musicology class taught by Professor Gene Greco. Bitter delivered three lectures entitled “On the Art of Listening,” “On Performers and Their Qualities,” and “On Conductors and Conducting.”

Bitter, a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, joined the UM faculty in 1940 as conductor of the UM Symphony Orchestra. After serving in World War II, he was the guest conductor of...

Memorial Tribute
For Emil Gould
(Excerpted from an article by Rachel Marcus)

A memorial tribute for Emil J. Gould, philanthropist, developer, and University of Miami trustee emeritus, was held on Sunday, September 12 at the Maurice Gusman Concert Hall on the campus of the University of Miami. Gould died in Miami on June 30 after a seven-month bout with cancer. He was 69.

UM President Edward T. Foote II introduced President Emeritus Henry King Stanford, the featured speaker at the tribute. The Miami String Quartet, Lawrence Craig, baritone, and UM artist-in-residence, pianist Ivan Davis performed.

Gould, a 12-year member of the UM Board of Trustees, was elected trustee emeritus of the University in 1990. A developer, Gould began his career in Miami in 1937 and later was responsible for revising the City of Miami Building Code. A native New Yorker, Gould lived in Miami for 50 years.

Gould’s cultural interests were as wide-ranging as his civic involvements. He was president of the Lowe Art Museum’s Friends of Art, the Friends of Theatre at the Ring Theatre, and chairman of the visiting committee for the School of Music. He was founder of the Greater Miami Philharmonic Society, and served on the board of directors for the Museum of Science, the Players State Theatre, the Greater Miami Opera Association, and the Friends of WLRN-FM.

Fittingly, the memorial program honoring him was held at the Gusman Concert Hall. It was there on March 10, 1991, that pianist Ivan Davis inaugurated the Hamburg Steinway concert grand piano donated by Emil and Estelle Gould to the School of Music.

As a teacher and conductor, Kelson has appeared at over eighty colleges and universities, as well as numerous state and national conferences, including those of the Music Educators National Conference, American Choral Directors Association, and International Association of Jazz Educators. Kelson has appeared as conductor and clinician for all-state choirs throughout the United States, Central America, South America, and Europe. Extensive involvement in the publishing field, authoring choral conducting and general music textbooks, and composing/arranging numerous choral works, has earned him six ASCAP awards.

His service to the University of Miami has been recognized by the presentation of awards for Outstanding Teacher, the Meritorious Faculty Teaching Award, the University of Miami "Inside-Out Award," the James W. McLamore Outstanding Service Award, the Vice President's Award for Service to the Greater Miami Community, and membership to Phi Beta Delta Honorary Society for International Scholars. Outside the university, Kelson has been honored by the American Music Conference, the University of Nebraska, the Colorado Music Educators Association, the Florida Music Educators Association, and the American Choral Directors Association.

Kelson will continue to live in Coral Gables with his wife Betty, a professional artist. During his retirement Kelson will dedicate additional time to various activities as guest conductor and clinician. Other projects will include producing a radio talk show and authoring a new book for choral conductors.

A special scholarship fund has been established for Dr. Lee Kelson. Those interested in donating to the fund should contact the School of Music Office of Development at (305) 284-2238.

including Fantasia A Due for tuba and piano, Concertino for Oboe and Piano, Variations on L.B.I.F.D. for brass quintet, and Come Live With Me and Be My Love, for a madrigal ensemble.

Alfred Reed is a native New Yorker, born in Manhattan in 1921. Beginning formal music training at the age of ten, he studied trumpet and was playing professionally by the time he was in high school. He worked with John Sacco in theory and harmony, and continued later as a scholarship student of Paul Yartin.

After three years at the Radio Workshop in New York, he enlisted in the Army during World War II, and was assigned to the 529 Army Air Force Band. During the next four years with this organization, Alfred Reed became deeply interested in the concert band and its music. He produced nearly 100 compositions and arrangements before leaving the Service.

In 1953, Reed became conductor of the Baylor Symphony Orchestra, at the same time completing his academic work, which had been interrupted by his leaving Juilliard for NBC some five years earlier. His master’s thesis was the Rhapsody for Viola and Orchestra, which later was to win the prestigious Luria Prize. In 1955 he accepted a post of editor in a major music publishing firm in New York. He left this position in 1966 to join the faculty of the University of Miami School of Music, holding a joint appointment in the department of theory-composition and music education, and to develop the music industry degree program.

Reed was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for his Symphony No. 3 in 1989. In Japan, where he was the first American invited to conduct the Tokyo Kosei Wind Orchestra, Reed is the most frequently performed foreign composer today. He appears regularly as a guest conductor with Tokyo Kosei Wind Orchestra and the Osaka Perfectural Wind Orchestra in Japan.

With over 250 published works for concert band, wind ensemble, orchestra, chorus, and various smaller chamber music groups, Reed is one of the nation’s most prolific and frequently performed composers. Some recent honors include election to the Board of Advisors of the Instrumentalist magazine, election to the Academy of Wind and Percussion Arts, biographical inclusion in Who’s Who in America, Who’s Who in the World, International Who’s Who in Music, Baker’s Biographical Dictionary, and Groves’s American Supplement.

As a special tribute, a scholarship fund has been established in Reed’s honor. Those interested in donating to the scholarship fund should contact the School of Music Office of Development at (305) 284-2238.

Charles Campbell Visits Moscow

(This article is excerpted from the Journal of the International Trombone Association, June 1993, by Charles Campbell)

Two years ago, the Moscow Philharmonie Orchestra was on tour in the United States with two of its concerts being held in the Miami area. Both my students and I were very interested in hearing this fine orchestra and consequently attended both programs. We met the members of the low brass section of the orchestra and invited them to campus for "after-concert" quartets and quintets. We were able to establish a very pleasant rapport.

The next year the orchestra returned to Miami. We reaffirmed our friendship and expanded our base of expression through a fine interpreter, a cellist from the orchestra. During this visit we talked in general terms of a possible exchange of faculty and students. With that established, I received an invitation from the Moscow Conservatory to present master classes in both trombone and composition.

The two trombone teachers at the Conservatory, Mikhail Dergiugin and Anatoly Skobelev (bass and tenor trombonists, respectively), asked me to hold master classes at the Gnesin Institute, a teacher-training school. In addition to the trombone activities, I was invited to lecture and demonstrate my compositions, via audio tapes, and discuss musical composition in the United States.

The trombone students are avid listeners of Western trombonists and admire what they hear on recordings. They were especially interested in American ragtime and jazz styles.

I was invited to a special "Koncert," held in my honor, which featured a jazz band of 14 players which used arrangements taken from recordings by students. After a short program, a rhythm section of faculty players, invited me to join them. It should be noted that there are no funds available for musical arrangements, recordings, or instruments. This, for me, was a very discouraging realization.

The Conservatory, with its marvelous teaching facilities and chamber recital halls, is full of tradition which dates back to the early 19th century. Even though the last 70 years have rather isolated this school, the raison d'être has not lessened. This is a first-class music school.

The trombone class at the Conservatory consisted of about 25 students. More than anything else, I was impressed by the students' attitudes and capacity for disciplined practice. They are a dedicated and talented group.

I had the good fortune to hear some of my music performed while there and, as a result of its acceptance, dedicated my Symphony No. 3 in One Movement to the Moscow Philharmonie. The first trombonist of the orchestra, Alexei Sholomko, asked me to compose a concerto for trombone and orchestra which will be performed during the orchestra’s 1994 U.S. tour.

All in all, I found the visit to Moscow enlightening. Getting to know the people in the arts, especially their lifestyles, attitudes toward their art, and their ongoing pursuit of musical excellence regardless of political change, made me reassess my own feelings and attitudes. I am thankful for the experience.

Music Education and Music Therapy

The music education faculty maintains several ongoing "outreach" programs that not only help the cause of music education in South Florida, but also enrich the degree programs in music education and help to enhance the reputation and recruiting of the School of Music. These programs include an annual music education in-service day for area music teachers, the South Florida Honor Bands, the Kindermusik program for preschool children, the West Laboratory Elementary School instrumental music program, and a number of summer workshops for music teachers. Brief accounts of these outreach programs follow:

The annual in-service day was not held this year because of public school schedule changes necessitated by Hurricane Andrew. The next in-service conference is scheduled for Friday, January 29, 1994. Planned in coordination with the Music Supervisor's Office of the Dade County Public Schools, the conference will offer a series of sessions for teachers of elementary music, choral music, band, and strings.

Under the leadership of Dr. DeCarbo, the Honor Bands has grown to become a major performing event for Florida high school students. This year there were more than 650 applicants, and Dr. Alfred Reed served as the guest conductor. This festival has proved to be a strong recruiting tool for wind players and percussionists during the years.

The Kindermusik program, which is under Dr. Jordan’s leadership, has seen phenomenal growth in the past couple of years. In addition to the four levels of Kindermusik for four and five year olds, a toddler’s program (Kindermusik Beginnings) for children from 18 months through three years has been added. During the fall of 1992, twelve classes were taught, and fourteen were taught during the spring of 1993.

The West Laboratory Elementary School instrumental program is unique among the elementary schools of Dade County. It provides instruction to fourth, fifth, and sixth graders on string, wind, and percussion instruments. Teaching assistants from the department are the primary instructors in the program, and they coordinate preservice teaching experiences for our undergraduate music education majors.

Pictured after the South Florida Honor Band concert are Michael Mann, associate director of bands; Alfred Reed, guest conductor; David Gray, conductor of the University of Miami Wind Ensemble; and Nicholas DeCarbo, music director and conductor of the South Florida Honor Band Festival.
The music education faculty has always been involved in coordinating and presenting summer workshops for teachers. Workshops offered during the summer of 1993 include computer applications in music (two levels), elementary and secondary general music, teaching music of world cultures, Kindermusik, and instrumental conducting. Last summer we offered a special workshop on the adolescent changing voice.

The music education faculty maintains a strong record of contributions to the profession at all levels. Two faculty members are active with the local Coalition for Quality Education. All faculty members are active in state and national professional organizations; collectively, they serve on the editorial boards of six professional journals: Bulletin of the Council for Research in Music Education, Journal of Music Teacher Education, Psychology of Music, The Quarterly Journal of Music Teaching and Learning, Research Perspectives in Music Education, and Southeastern Journal of Music Education.

Music Engineering

The music engineering program, together with its Audio Engineering Society (AES) student chapter, welcomed its former program director, Bill Porter, back to campus. Porter is a successful recording engineer who worked with legends such as Roy Orbison and Elvis Presley. During his visit, Porter presented a retrospective of his work. The AES chapter also hosted a visit by Russ Berger, one of the industry’s foremost recording studio designers. Berger presented a technical lecture on studio acoustics.

The music engineering program is actively preparing to install new studio equipment in the Weeks Center for Recording and performance, due for completion in December 1993. Work is already underway on wiring harnesses and other equipment that will be prefabricated prior to installation. When complete, the Weeks Center will double the School’s capacity to both educate students in recording techniques, and its ability to make high quality recordings.

The program has welcomed the first electrical engineering/audio students into the music media and industry classes. This sister program in the College of Engineering has attracted nationwide attention, and promises to extend the program’s reputation into the areas of audio equipment design and manufacture.

In addition to its generous donation policy, Sony Corporation continues to play a major role in music engineering at UM. Faculty member Ken Pohlmann completed a U.S. mini-disc lecture series for Sony; John Monforte and Clyde Hagler visited Mexico, Argentina, and Chile in an ongoing series of lectures for Sony; and MUE students have joined this departmental effort by translating Sony documentation into Spanish. In addition, more graduates have been employed by Sony in a variety of positions.

Music Industry

Bruce Hornsby, recently honored by the University as a Distinguished Alumnus, has agreed to serve on the advisory board of the Media Writing and Production Program. He will review student projects and supply taped resource materials for student analysis and use.

Miles Braffett, a 1987 graduate from the music industry program, presented a lecture on international licensing and marketing of films and recordings at a recent Music Industry Forum. Braffett is Director of Marketing Systems for EMI Music.

Studio Music and Jazz

The studio/jazz writing program received a very generous gift, an AKAI 5900 Sampler, from former student Jim Trompeter, who is producing and writing jingles in Chicago.

During the fall semester, the Concert Jazz Band performed at the Hollywood Jazz Festival, with Joe Henderson and soloists, and toured Brazil. The band also performed in Festival Miami with trumpet legend Red Rodney. The concert featured Rodney and UM faculty members Gary Campbell (saxophone), Vince Maggio (piano), and Don Coffman (bass). The Concert Jazz Band spring concert featured saxophonist Michael Brecker.

The University of Miami Jazz Vocal Ensemble I, under the direction of Larry Lapin, enjoys the reputation of being one of the finest jazz vocal groups in the country. In addition to appearances on local and national television, Jazz Vocal I has performed throughout the United States and continues to receive invitations to perform at prestigious music festivals and conventions such as the National Association of Jazz Educators Conference, the Music Educators National Conference, and the Montreux Jazz Festival. In October of this year, the group performed at the Hollywood Jazz Festival with internationally known jazz vocalist Mark Murphy.
The group’s most recent honor was to be named “winner” in Downbeat Magazine’s 1992 “dee bee” competition. This is the seventh Downbeat Award in the past eight years for this ensemble. Jazz Vocal I has released two albums, No More Blues and Citizens of the Universe. A third recording, Moment’s Notice, was scheduled for release in the spring of 1993.

The woodwind ensemble is under the direction of Luciano Magnanini. The prize winning compositions were conducted by Dennis Kam.

UM Singers Tour Brazil

For 21 years the University of Miami Singers, under the direction of Lee Kjelson, have traveled the world, entertaining audiences with their uniquely diverse choral music presentations. During the month of May, the Singers performed throughout Brazil, presenting six concerts and workshops in Porto Alegre, Brasilia, Goiania, Vitoria, and Rio de Janeiro. These appearances were arranged through the cooperative efforts of the Fulbright South American program, the University of Miami International Studies Program, Arts America of Washington, D.C., the U.S. Embassy and Bicultural Centers in Brazil.

In addition to Lee Kjelson, faculty leadership included Robert Gower, associate professor of music, and Kathleen Shannon, adjunct assistant professor of music. Gower served as associate conductor, pianist, and conductor/arranger of the Singers’ popular music section. Shannon was the administrator as well as assistant conductor and designer of the staging and choreography. Rosa Moreno, senior staff assistant, coordinated the business activities for the Singers in preparation for the tour.

Friends sponsored the annual donor recognition brunch in November at the University Faculty Club. Donors who provide scholarships for music students had an opportunity to meet the recipients. This year's scholarship awards were made in the name of late honorary life member, Emil Gould.

The winter musical was held in the home of Ruth Neiken in January. It was attended by more than seventy members and their guests. The musical program was presented by pianist Sergio Gonzalez who performed a program from the works of Chopin, de Falla, and Liszt.

A lecture presentation was given by professor Ted Tims, program director of music therapy, in March in the Hecht Residential College. Professor Ken Pohlmann, program director of music engineering, was the guest speaker at a program in April, and election of officers took place at a meeting in May.
